

Mortimer House.

The specialist care team at Mortimer House encompasses three main areas:

- Older people with learning disabilities
- People with dementia, including those with Down's Syndrome
- End of life care

The individual's social, health and nursing care needs are provided for, as well as their sensory and physical requirements.

Facilities

Mortimer House has 28 ensuite bedrooms on two floors, served by lifts. Each floor has its own dining room, and there are also individual kitchenettes.

Hundreds of lightbulbs and broad windows make the rooms light and airy, and automatic lighting systems brighten the environment at key times of the day.

Dementia specific signage and different colour schemes help me people through the corridors, highlighting handrails and doors.

The landscaped gardens include sensory features and different areas with gazebos and trellises.

The general environment contributes to an enhanced quality of life.

"The care at Mortimer House extends beyond the nursing home, as was proved by my sister's recent stay in hospital. She is happy, that speaks for itself." Relative

Activities

The emphasis is on a variety of activities, and staff at Mortimer House are inventive and innovative at bringing experiences into the home.

Even though it is a larger house, everyone is cared for individually.

The staff are very skilled in supporting people with learning disabilities who are facing the challenges of growing older.

Josie Bolt, Home Manager

Mortimer runs an in-house monthly church service with the local church. There are also four qualified tutors who hold activity sessions for 14 hours each week, involving all residents. Activities include sewing, literacy, arts, skittles, crafts and much more, depending on individual interest.

Residents are invited to attend small monthly meetings to discuss anything they would like to do, or anything they are not happy about. As far as possible residents decide how they want to be supported.

Staff

Perhaps the greatest asset of Mortimer House is its dedicated staff team, who have been commended repeatedly for their excellent care.

Mortimer House has qualified specialised nurses on site 24-hours a day. They are able to help people maintain their skill levels for years to come.

Our service is recommended by relatives to others. The staff team are very aware of how important it is to you that your loved one is well looked after.
